While qualified to speak on a variety of topics, Dr. Veltmeyer is especially passionate about the current national debate over health care reform, the fate of Obamacare and the subsequent failure of the initial House effort to repeal and replace it. Dr. Veltmeyer and his family have directly experienced the failures of the Affordable Care Act, denial of insurance coverage, and delays in critical medical treatment.

As an advocate of returning power and choice to patients in health care, he is the author of “The Medical Association Membership” plan, a form of direct primary care which holds the promise of reducing costs and slashing insurance premiums, while strengthening the traditional doctor-patient relationship and protecting the poor. The MAM will take medical decisions out of the hands of for-profit insurance companies and faceless government bureaucrats and put doctors and patients back in charge.
